

Woman shoots strange 'frogman' in US

In the 1950s, a woman lived on a rural farm in the southern United States. One night, a reptilian humanoid appeared from nowhere. Scared, she shot him down with her gun ...

One day a woman was visiting her great aunt. She asked him why she was still sitting with her gun in her hand. It was then that she told him a terrifying story.

She revealed to him that one evening their dogs and animals had gone mad, restless and panicked. She then took her shotgun and went outside to check on what was going on. Outside she saw an alien. The young woman told the story of her great aunt:

“She didn’t see it immediately, but when she looked toward the barn (and there was a big pond on the side of the barn), she saw a ‘frogman’ as she called it, coming up from the side of the barn. It was walking toward her. It wasn’t that tall. She stood maybe five foot four inches. It was a little bit taller than her. He had webbed hands, and it was walking straight to her. She yelled to it to stop, but it kept walking. She stepped of the porch with her double barrel shotgun and she shot it dead. The blood of the reptilian was green. Her husband heard the shotgun go off. He came outside. They were elderly at this point. When he stepped of the porch, she said "Look I killed something, I killed something, and it is not human." They walked out there to the side of the barn. She and her husband buried the thing. We asked where was it? She said that they buried it right where they killed it, near the barn. After they buried it, the animals got quiet again. Her husband told her not to tell anybody that story."

This incredible story does not end there. About a month later, the woman and her husband saw a blue UFO flying over their home. This ship landed not far from there. Quickly, reptilian creatures came out of the barn. They walked towards the place where their comrade had been killed and buried.

She tells:

"They came out of the ship, and they went straight to the mound where they had buried this thing. They put their hands over the ground. This dead frogman thing, that she had killed, came out of the ground. It wasn't alive, it was dead. They took that thing, and they put in on the ship. Then they went over to the pond, and they raised up their hands and a space ship came out of the pond. That pond was bigger than a regular size pond. It was almost the size of a small lake. They looked at them (the great-aunt and her husband) but didn't say or do anything. They went back on the ship and zoomed back into the sky. That is why she always kept her double barrel shotgun always next to her. Even when she went to the chicken coop, or anywhere else, she always kept her shotgun with her because they might come back."
