

Nostradamus predicted Apollo 11 and the moon landing

Nostradamus is undoubtedly one of the greatest seers in history. In his lifetime, this apothecary predicted a multitude of future events, most of which actually happened. Although his writings date from the 16th century, they still seem to be relevant today.

Michel de Nostredame was immensely famous. In 1555, the queen of Catherine de Medicis called him to the royal court. Nostradamus have predicted the Great Fire of London of 1666, the rise to power of Adolf Hitler, or the assassination of John Fitzgerald Kennedy in 1963.

Some experts assure that the majority of major world events are recorded in his work entitled Les Prophéties and written many centuries ago.

On July 20, 1969, the conquest of space reached its peak in its short history: two astronauts Neil Armstrong and Buzz Aldrin walked on the moon while Michael Collins remained in orbit. However, some skeptics claimed that the alleged event was a hoax and that the footage of Man's first step on the Moon was shot in a movie studio.

People, who have scrupulously analyzed the quatrains of the French prophet, assure that Nostradamus had predicted everything: the alleged conquest of the Moon and the fact that the American government has manipulated everyone to show its superiority in the space field.

Century 9, quatrain 65 reads as follows:

*“Dedans le coing de Luna viendra rendre
O sera prins & mis en terre estrange.
Les fruicts immeurs seront grand esclandre,
Grand vitupere, l'vn grande loange.”*

This passage is about astronauts going to strange lands on the moon. He describes that this event caused a huge scandal ("grand esclandre").
