

Black Triangle Spotted in Henderson, NV

On the evening of February 3rd, 2023, a mysterious black triangle was spotted in the sky above Henderson, Nevada. The sighting occurred at approximately 8:08 pm, and was reported just under an hour later at 8:58 pm. The sighting was then posted online on March 6th, 2023.

The witness, who was on their balcony at the time, described the sky as thick with clouds when they noticed movement in their peripheral vision. Turning their attention towards the nearby airport, they saw a large black triangle emerge from the clouds. The object had smooth edges and was roughly the size of a commercial airplane. It moved towards the witness before making a tight U-turn and shooting up into the clouds.

One of the most striking features of the object were the lights that were observed on it. The witness stated that the lights were on the underside of the triangle and seemed to be rotating or flashing in some way. Additionally, the witness reported that there were other aircraft in the area or possibly even chasing the object.

The duration of the sighting was brief, with the witness stating that it "just happened" before the object disappeared into the clouds. One particularly unusual aspect of the sighting was the complete lack of sound emitted by the object. Despite its size and the reported presence of other aircraft in the area, no sound was heard.

Overall, the sighting of the black triangle in the sky over Henderson, NV remains a mystery. While some may speculate that it was a military aircraft or a drone, the lack of sound and the unusual flight pattern make it difficult to definitively identify the object. The witness's description of the lights and the presence of other aircraft only adds to the intrigue of this unexplained phenomenon.

Sources

- nuforc.org
- chat.openai.com