

Strange sighting in the skies of Houston

Last September 5th, a witness made an unusual observation in the skies of Houston, Texas. At around 9:05 pm, the man was walking his dog in the residential neighborhood at the intersection of Grannis Street and Easthaven Blvd when an unidentified object suddenly appeared in the sky.

According to his description, the object had an angular diamond shape about 16 feet long. It was moving at low altitude, around 10 feet above the road. Passing under a streetlight, the witness was able to distinguish its grey mottled color due to circles that composed it. The craft was moving silently and without lights.

Although the observation lasted only one and a half minutes, it was surprising enough for the walker to report it to NUFORC (National UFO Reporting Center). Another intriguing detail, the dog accompanying him also had a reaction of fear when seeing the object fly over the intersection, suggesting something unusual occurred.

For now, no rational explanation has been provided for this sighting. The shocked witness by the speed and stealth of the craft remains perplexed about its true nature. New testimonies would be welcome to try to better understand this still unexplained event.
