

Strange Triangular Object Spotted in Seattle Sky

A new UFO sighting has intrigued residents of Seattle. According to a report filed on the National UFO Reporting Center (NUFORC) website, two people claimed to have witnessed an unusual triangular object on April 30th around 11:02 pm local time.

The gray, triangle-shaped object with lights along its perimeter was spotted in the sky by two friends from their balcony in Seattle. "It looked like a large triangle, low in the sky, with lights lining the perimeter of two sides," the report details.

While the craft was initially flying straight like a normal aircraft, it then made a strange movement with its sides appearing to bend slightly. "At one point its sides seemed to bend down and upwards a little," the witness stated.

The unidentified object was moving slowly and quietly until a roof obstructed the observers' view. They then tried to spot it again from the front of the house but the UFO had already disappeared.

This Seattle sky sighting has reignited speculation once again about the presence of unknown aircraft in our airspace. Authorities have not commented on this report so far.
