The Haunted War Cemetery of Guwahati

Guwahati, Assam - Nestled on Navagraha Road, in the heart of the Navagraha Hills in Guwahati, the Guwahati War Cemetery is more than just a place of remembrance. This historic site, dedicated to soldiers who fell during World War II, is now at the center of numerous legends and paranormal stories that intrigue both locals and visitors alike.

A Place of Memory and Remembrance

The cemetery houses the graves of soldiers from various nationalities who lost their lives during the war. Maintained by the Commonwealth War Graves Commission, this solemn site pays tribute to those who sacrificed their lives for peace. Each tombstone serves as a poignant reminder of the horrors of war and the bravery of those who fought.

Unexplained Phenomena

Beyond its historical significance, the cemetery is also known for the strange events that allegedly take place there. Many visitors have reported feeling a deep unease after visiting the site. Some even claim to have fallen seriously ill without any apparent reason after their visit.

Eyewitness accounts also mention spectral apparitions and paranormal activities occurring within the cemetery grounds. Moving shadows, inexplicable whispers, and an overwhelming sense of presence have been repeatedly reported. Even more disturbingly, local residents claim to hear screams and cries in the dead of night, particularly around midnight, despite the cemetery being closed from 5 PM onwards.

Between Myth and Reality

These stories have contributed to making the Guwahati War Cemetery one of the most mysterious places in Assam. For some, these phenomena are merely a product of imagination and the fear associated with cemeteries. For others, they could be the restless souls of fallen soldiers, still lingering in this emotionally charged and historically rich site.
