

Anita Mitchell, Ex-Wife of Apollo 14 Astronaut Edgar Mitchell, Confirms His Beliefs About UFOs

In a recent interview, Anita Mitchell, the ex-wife of Edgar Mitchell—astronaut of the Apollo 14 mission and a well-known advocate of the existence of UFOs—has confirmed her late husband’s convictions. “He always felt there were UFOs out there because many pilots and astronauts had seen something,” she revealed. Among those witnesses were James McDivitt, who reportedly observed UFOs during his space missions, and Gordon Cooper, who claimed to have seen a UFO while flying a conventional aircraft.

Anita Mitchell is also a believer. “Do you really think we’re the only intelligence in the universe? Because if we are, the universe is in trouble,” she quipped.

Her comments come alongside the release of her new book, “You Don’t Look Like an Astronaut’s Wife!” In it, she shares personal insights into her life as the spouse of an astronaut and delves into the thoughts and beliefs that shaped Edgar Mitchell’s fascination with UFOs. The book explores his curiosity about unexplained phenomena and Anita’s own perspectives on the existence of extraterrestrial life.

Edgar Mitchell, who flew on the Apollo 14 mission in 1971, became a prominent figure in the UFO community for his bold statements about extraterrestrials. He frequently claimed that encounters with UFOs had been covered up by governments worldwide, earning him both admiration and skepticism. His career and outspoken views cemented his legacy as a key advocate for greater transparency about the unknown.

Anita Mitchell’s book promises to offer a unique perspective on this fascinating man while challenging readers to reconsider their understanding of life in the universe. For fans of space exploration, mystery, and the unknown, her memoir is set to be a compelling read.
