

Three White Lights Over Wales: Former Royal Navy Technician Reports Astonishing UFO Sighting

A startling new report has been added to the National UFO Reporting Center (NUFORC) database, this time from a quiet corner of Wales. On May 22, 2025, at 2:20 PM local time, a former leading aircraft technician with the Royal Navy claims to have witnessed a brief but extraordinary aerial phenomenon over the town of Johnstown.

The witness, who remains anonymous, recounted the experience in detail, describing three white lights flying in a triangular formation directly overhead. The event, which lasted no more than five seconds, left the seasoned military observer both puzzled and awestruck.

“I was sitting outside smoking a cigarette when I saw them pass over,” the witness reported. “The speed didn’t match anything I’ve ever seen — not satellites, not aircraft. I spent seven years in the Royal Navy and I know how planes move. This was something else.”

According to the report, one of the three lights appeared to move slightly out of sync with the others, leading the observer to believe these were not lights on a single craft, but rather three independent objects moving in coordination.

The estimated speed was said to be several thousand miles per hour, crossing a vast portion of the sky in mere seconds — and crucially, in total silence.

“There was absolutely no noise. None. And that’s what really stunned me,” the witness noted. “It was just incredible. I have absolutely no idea what it could have been.”

The objects were described as slightly larger than stars and directly overhead, making it difficult to gauge their altitude. However, the observer estimated they were flying at several thousand feet.
