

Mysterious Cylindrical Object Reported Over Southern France

Turenne, France — A recent report submitted to the National UFO Reporting Center (NUFORC) describes an unusual aerial sighting that allegedly occurred over Turenne, in the Nouvelle-Aquitaine region of France, on May 1, 2026.

According to the witness, a security camera captured a short video lasting approximately 42 seconds showing two objects traveling through the night sky. The sighting was later reviewed and reported to NUFORC on May 6.

The primary object was described as a large white, cigar-shaped craft surrounded by a luminous haze. The witness estimated its size at around 300 feet (90 meters) in length and its speed at roughly 300 mph (480 km/h). The object reportedly appeared at an elevation angle of 45 degrees and was moving eastward.

Upon reviewing the footage, the witness concluded that one of the objects was likely a very large meteor, while the second appeared to be a cylindrical craft following closely behind it. The witness speculated that the unidentified object was tracking the meteor and possibly attempting to divert it away from populated areas.

The report notes that the object displayed visible lights and was surrounded by an aura-like glow. No official explanation has been provided for the sighting, and no independent analysis of the video has been made public.

As with many UFO reports, the available information is based solely on witness testimony and recorded footage. Without additional evidence or expert examination, the true nature of the objects remains unknown.

The case adds to the growing number of unexplained aerial phenomena reported worldwide and is likely to attract the attention of UFO researchers and enthusiasts alike.
