

A Mysterious Object Seen in a NASA Photo Sparks Online Speculation

A photograph recently released by NASA showing Earth from space has sparked strong reactions across social media. Some internet users claim to have spotted a glowing yellow object orbiting our planet, described as massive and unusually shaped.

Among them is blogger Scott C. Waring, known for his posts about unexplained phenomena, who believes it could be an extraterrestrial spacecraft observing humanity. According to him, the object measures nearly 60 miles wide (about 96 kilometers), roughly three times the size of Singapore.

NASA has not issued any official comment regarding these interpretations so far. Experts, however, point out that this type of image can contain reflections, optical anomalies, digital artifacts, or sensor-related effects, which are often the source of visual misunderstandings.

In the absence of scientific confirmation, the mysterious shape remains, for now, a subject of speculation.
